A note from the editor: "Mis-wanting"

While doing a certificate program called The Science of Well-being by Laurie Santos the Yale Professor, I gathered a valuable insight on how most of us in our daily life sacrifice our happiness and well-being due to mis-wanting. Though, I hadn't heard of mis-wanting ...I was certainly doing it.

Mis-wanting is a term applied to those things we want in our lives that we think will bring us happiness that in-fact won't.

We think THINGS will make us happy. The truth is we're terrible at predicting what will bring us happiness. We think it will be the big house, the new car, or the million dollars, when in fact due to the hedonistic principle they actually don't bring us long term happiness. What we should be wanting instead are EXPERIENCES. And they don't have to be big.

"We forecast those things will make us happy, but they don't make us as happy as we think," said Santos about the phenomenon she refers to as "mis-wanting." Social science has generated many new insights into what makes people happy and how they can achieve that, Santos said. Santos points to the psychological phenomenon of 'mis-wanting', which is what has been leading people to pursue the wrong goals in their life and is motivation behind conducting such a class as well.

Laurie Santos in the Yale course explains "Our minds lie to us all the time. We mis-want things. We think we need to change our life circumstances to become happier," Santos says. On the other hand, she finds that "what plays a much bigger role are our simple practices, simple acts like making a social connection, taking time for gratitude, or taking time to be in the present moment."

"Very happy people spend time with others, they prioritize time with their friends, time with their family, they even take time to talk to the barista," Santos said. She points to the psychological phenomenon of "mis-wanting," which leads people to pursue the wrong goals in life. "We work really hard to get a great salary or to buy this huge house," she said. "Those things are not going to make us as happy as we think."

The video lecture of my happiness class focuses on ancient philosophy of Buddhism which seems to be relevant in even today's scenario, specially when one seeks to find sheer peace and tranquility. In the ongoing journey of human civilization we all have been constantly engaged in search of Happiness and its true meaning. Buddhism in its collective consciousness has committed successful endeavors towards this significant aspect of human life. This small effort of video discussion about Buddhist philosophies, traces out little nuances and contextualities in connection with present day notion of Happiness and its modalities.

वीडियो व्याख्यान बौद्ध धर्म के प्राचीन दर्शन पर केंद्रित है जो आज के परिदृश्य में भी प्रासंगिक प्रतीत होता है, खासकर जब कोई व्यक्ति शांति और शांति की तलाश करता है। मानव सभ्यता की चल रही यात्रा में हम सभी निरंतर सुख और उसके वास्तविक अर्थ की खोज में लगे हुए हैं।

बौद्ध धर्म ने अपनी सामूहिक चेतना में मानव जीवन के इस महत्वपूर्ण पहलू की दिशा में सफल प्रयास किए हैं। बौद्ध दर्शन के बारे में वीडियो चर्चा का यह छोटा सा प्रयास, खुशी और उसके तौर—तरीकों की वर्तमान धारणा के संबंध में छोटी बारीकियों और संदर्भों का पता लगाता है।

Time for conscience-based decision-making

Editorial by TK Mishra

https://www.speakingtree.in/article/time-for-conscience-based-decisionmaking?fbclid=IwAR1LqzTOPquhjnHafqU4sGvcKNKLpKeKgZXzpoZqH3FzsRq-VLMtJlb-siU

The current pandemic has made the trend of empirical analysis redundant. Unlike the past, when we had the benefit of historical experiences and data, this time the future pathway has become full of uncertainties. Covid-19 has taught us that intuition-led need orientation is more important than technology-led demand orientation of business.

The post-pandemic good news that we get to know through the conscience or spiritual awareness is that the world has changed for the right purpose and meaning. People have begun rethinking why and what they are doing. Common advice that one gives for business decision-making may not work, for example, don't make hasty decisions, gather as much information as you can, consult experts, calculate risks, and weigh the pros and cons. When things do not work out despite all the analysis, waiting endlessly for some good fortune to come will not do. Like successful startups today, one will have to make decisions based on incomplete information. This means using a conscience-based decision-making that keeps spirituality at its core.

While your 'outwardly' mindfulness takes decisions sitting at the driving seat of decision-making, consciencebased 'inwardly' meditation must do the back-seat driving. Conscience-based decisions, even based on incomplete information, aren't fallible as they have the power of trinity – mind, body and soul.

When you go against your conscience, you may regret it or not enjoy the outcome, even when things have worked out. On the contrary, whenever you go with your conscience, you would be happy with your decisions, even when things do not work out.

By creating an antidote against threats, spirituality integrates your power of mind, body and soul. It restores confidence and hope in you; it springs a simple and prompt solution to problems.

The more spiritual you are, the more robust you become in making decisions and neutralising threats. Kenneth Pargament, who spent a lifetime doing research on spirituality, aptly says, "Spirituality is a way of seeing or perceiving the world ... in a deeper way, to see that there is more to reality than what meets the eye, there is a deeper dimension." On the basis of such perception, our conscience always warns us before we do wrong, but we often reject it having least faith in it.

Replacing mechanical minds that operate according to the data fed, we need spiritual minds that uphold conscience. While we need to be inwardly meditative to get connected to the divine thread, we need to be outwardly mindful to see the changes taking place. And both the tools work for magical outcomes when we are surrendered to God.

The Bhagwad Gita is a practical handbook which tells us what to do, when and how to solve whatever problems come our way. But to have reverence for the Gita or have telepathic conversation with God, you must have a clear conscience. It is like you cannot connect to a satellite in the sky if your antenna has layers of dirt on it.

New Delhi, Focus News: The Student Welfare Committee of Ramanujan College, University of Delhi, organized a fascinating webinar on the topic: "Moving Beyond the Tumult; Towards a Ray of Hope" on 3rd May, 2021. The webinar was conducted using the zoom as it was a very ideal and friendly platform that also helped us gain maximum attendance. The timings were from 11:00 am to 1:00 pm, more than 40+ participants joined the webinar. The aim of the webinar was to make people look on the brighter side amidst these hard times and to show them a way to find a light in these dark times.

This speaker for the webinar was Mr. Sandeep Sadhu who has great experiences as a freelance consultant, educationalist and a certified personality development mentor. The event was started by welcome address by Convenor of SWC Dr. Madhu Bhatta. Honorable Principal Dr. S.P. Aggrawal said very illuminating words. Mr. T.K. Mishra suggested to hold on to hope as we survive through this pandemic.

Mr. Sandeep took on the lead of the webinar by explaining us what tumult meant and overcoming the tumult with positive changes that covid brought. Mr. Sandeep Sadhu explained various ways to overcome the chaos that we are all tied up in; he called this situation a blessing in disguise. He talked about engaging in activities that might distruct us from the situation. He suggested to only have limited access to the social media and the news so that we can keep a healthy check on our mental health. Later he took up some questions from the audience and answered them all very positively. The vote of thanks was given by Faculty Member Mr. Subodh who immensely thanked the speaker. Finally, the webinar was concluded by the president of SWC, Anvecksha. The overall session was definitely a success and surely each participant seemed very satisfied. The webinar was very interactive and many participants shared their views on certain topics as well as asked questions to the very experienced speaker.
